

The drop log

Businesses found in Accra in August 2026 that were not sent to the client, and the reason for each.

Trades only, no names. These businesses were never delivered to anyone, and calling a named company dead in public is not something a quiet profile justifies.

#	Trade	Verdict	Newest dated signal	What made it look worth calling	Why it failed
1	Phone accessories wholesaler	Dropped	11 months	30,400 views on one post. Good trading location.	Strong volume signal once. Nothing recent.
2	Imported grocery wholesaler	Dropped	About 1 year	4.1 from 34 Google reviews.	No evidence of recent trading.
3	Cosmetics wholesaler	Dropped	7 months	4.3 from 8 Google reviews.	Profile unclaimed, so nobody is managing it. No owner activity at all.
4	Auto parts	Dropped	None found	4.2 from 248 Google reviews, which is a lot.	Not a company. It is a listing for a whole market area, so there is nobody to call.
5	Bags and shoes wholesaler	Dropped	9 months	4,200 views. Offered payment on delivery within Accra, which is exactly the right signal.	Right kind of business, no sign it is still running.
6	Building materials showroom	Dropped	10 months	7,600 views. Fixed premises.	No recent activity.
7	Kitchenware retailer	Dropped	9 April 2026	Indexed post, real shop.	Nearly five months quiet by the time it was checked.
8	Wholesale delivery service	Disqualified	3 months	1,400 views.	A competitor, not a prospect. Logged as market intelligence instead.
9	Logistics and delivery firm	Disqualified	Current	Advertising for dispatch riders on Jiji, so they are growing.	A competitor, and one expanding on the client's patch. Worth the client knowing, not worth calling.
10	General wholesale trader	Disqualified	1 week	Surfaced on an Accra search, posted a week ago.	Wrong country. Nigerian seller. Now filtered out of every search.
11	Cosmetics wholesaler	Held	4 months	7,000 views. Advertises orders 24 hours a day by call or WhatsApp.	Good fundamentals, stale signal. Needs a phone call to settle it.
12	Rice and provisions wholesaler	Held	2 months	3,200 views. Delivery and bulk pricing offered on request.	Needs a ring test.
13	Foodservice distributor	Held	13 May 2026	1,873 followers, 591 posts, a published next day delivery promise, supplies schools, hotels and hospitals.	Fourteen weeks silent. A professional presence is not the same as a trading one.

14	Pharmaceutical wholesaler	Held	3 months	4.2 from 65 reviews. Two branches, one open 24 hours.	Also runs its own warehousing, so it may be a competitor rather than a customer. Two questions to settle, not one.
15	Speciality food distributor	Held	April 2018 on its own site	4.1 from 52 reviews. National distribution across retail, wholesale and foodservice.	Nothing digital touched in years. Almost certainly still trading, and unprovable from a desk.
16	Beauty and skincare wholesaler	Held, then reversed	8 months	Claims shipping to more than a thousand retailers on its own trade site.	Held in week one on this evidence. Found in week two trading fortnightly on a separate wholesale account. The check was wrong and this is the correction.

Sourced in week one	49
Sent to the client	18
Not sent	31
Share that failed the check	63%
Listed on this log	16
Dropped outright	7
Disqualified as competitors or wrong	3
Held for a phone call	5
Held, then reversed on a second log	1

The log lists 16. The other 15 that were not sent were duplicates, near misses on the same business, or rows that never got far enough to be worth recording.

The thirty day check

The rule

Strongest evidence first

1

2

3

4

5

Two things that mean nothing

Two traps

The ceiling, stated plainly

Where the method was wrong

Questions

A business goes on the sheet only if it showed a dated sign of life in the previous thirty days. Not a listing, not a website, not a follower count. Something it did, on a date that can be read and checked.

Confirmed by this business, on a Google profile. The owner verifying their own listing. The best signal there is.

An update the owner published to their own profile.

A new photo on the profile, shown as Latest N ago.

An Instagram or TikTok post date. Exact, and readable in the page itself.

The newest customer review. Weakest of the five, because a review proves a customer came once, not that the place is open now.

Claim this business on a Google profile means nobody is managing it, which is a reliable negative. A footer showing the current year is generated by the website software and would say 2026 on a site last touched in 2019. Three sites in this sample did exactly that.

Pinned posts sit first in an Instagram grid, so the top tile is often old. Reading it as the newest post once made a fourteen week old account look forty nine weeks dead. And a Google Maps search on a phone number lands straight on the business, but only for mobile numbers. Landlines starting 030 need a name and location search instead.

About thirty per cent of businesses can be cleared from a desk. The rest need somebody to ring them. That is not a tooling problem waiting to be solved, it is the shape of this market, and it is why calling is part of the service rather than an extra.

The last row of the log is a business held back in week one on an eight month old signal, then found in week two trading every fortnight under a separate wholesale account. It was the strongest prospect in the pool. Looking for a second account before writing anything off is now part of the routine.

Ernest, Quadem Digital, ernest@quademdigital.com